

The effect of the current telephone privacy law in Indiana has been incredible. My family now has some time to itself, without the intrusion of solicitors over the phone. It is inconceivable that you would consider reducing the the provisions of this law to allow the harrassment to begin anew. It would be yet another example that this is a government for business, not the people. The people of Indiana have made it quite clear that they do not want phone solicitations.